
Dating my GK 800RB

So I have a couple of GK's I was thinking of selling that weren't used. I have a '76 Blackface that belonged to my parents. It has a serial no. of 061145 and says "80/92". I also have a '82 Aqua Champ that I bought brand new and that's serial no. is 611016. I do not have the serial numbers on both of them or the names or anything but I know it's a GK. I also have a serial no. 061271 for a amps that has a blackface. Is that any help? Oct 28, 2009 061145 . 061145 . 061145 . :smug: . :smug: . :smug: . :smug: . A: From the first serial number, the serial number can be 9 digits. These serial numbers are from 1984-2000. The last 2 digits are a date code, with the following dates. 1960s: 3-digit numbers 0001-0900 1970s: 4-digit numbers 1000-9999 The amp you have is from 1984, so it is the first of the 9-digit serial number years. Based on this graph, you could be anywhere from 2010-2011, but it is likely to be before 2009. Well, that certainly explains the "weird" ending of the series, and I am absolutely convinced that this ending was the way it was supposed to be all along. If you consider a literal "ending" as being a thing that occurs at the end of a series, and one "ending" as what is presented at the end of a series, then... well, OK, that was kind of a weird ending of season 6, but I suppose if you want to call it an ending, it was. There were no "epic" conclusions, and so I suppose "ending" might be a bit strong. But I will stand by my opinion that it was definitely the "ending" intended all along. So that does not really explain what the Final Battle was, and I could not find any information about it. But, what we do know: Black Widow has gotten the upper hand, she has restored her memories, (remember that all of this was supposed to be Fury's own memories, and she intentionally erased them because she didn't want Fury
